Full text of on the Characteristics

In both one and the other the high feeling of faith was enervated; and this deficiency was sensibly felt in a lowering of general tone, both in the domain of intellect and in that of practice. We read Milton for instruction, retire harrassed and overburdened, and look elsewhere for recreation: we desert our master, and seek for companions. Like him, he professes himself a Christian Deist and vigorously protests against being supposed to be an enemy to Christianity.

Reception of Shaftesbury's Works 1700

The length of the diameter of the hollow sphere, is thus given by Hesiod.
