Among the Pond People

We will go to a place where nobody can hear what we say. Every evening they gathered around him, some of them swimming to him, some walking forward, some sidewise, and some backward. If you are so careless, you will soon not have a whole fin to your back—or your front either.

When Father Stickleback had asked Mrs. You know we both carry air about with us in the water, and so few of our neighbors seem to care anything for it. They would have liked to ask her about it, but they went to sleep for the night soon after she got up, and whenever she saw them coming she flew away.
