Accordingly, the PASE Domesday dataset contains a series of columns which capture the value of each landholding in pounds, shillings and pence for both 1066 and 1086. On the question of ownership there are three political suggestions in the field : 1.

Details

Pre-Conquest landholders whose names were relatively unusual can naturally be identified with greater confidence than those whose names were common. There are difficulties here: in particular, there was considerable variety in the number of acres which constituted a hide, carucate or sulung. .

Hide (unit)

This makes it possible to identify and compare records relating to personal names in Domesday Book and other sources far more efficiently than has ever been possible before.
