The Wine may fail, the King may die, Age blot out Woman's youth; But nothing ever can destroy The mighty power of Truth. But our grief-stricken train is a wild sea that surges, That spreads to yon starry pavilion o'erhead And girdles the globe : for all nature sings dirges.

Établissements Zanello — Wikimanche

His sword, vowed only to be drawn in the cause of truth, justice and rational liberty, reposes still in its scabbard, and our arms can no more shield him from wrong and oppression. We offer, Lord, our humble prayer, And thank thee for thy grace bestowed, In leading us beneath thy care Thus far in wisdom's pleasant road.
