À bout de souffle (1960) de Jean

Ever the film buff, Godard packs this film with allusions drawn equally from American pop culture and high art: Nicholas Ray is referenced alongside Dylan Thomas, a 1956 Thunderbird Coupe alongside William Faulkner's Wild Palms. In order to shoot under low-light levels, Godard had to use film, which was not available as at the time. Titled La Nouvelle Vague in French, the French New Wave was born alongside the existential movement, at a time when French intellectuals struggled to find meaning in a post-WWII world.
