More importantly, during the period of cooperation, we have become more than just business partners. It is a platform to ideate something really out of the box seeming to be absurd and impossible at one stage and then pursuing it to take that to daylight through ones' emotion, expression, acumen, zeal, determination and perseverance. They administered two different versions of the same working memory task during the fMRI scanning session, one version requiring much more than the other.

This is probably because those with a reduced latent inhibition actually have more accurate intuitions! It's not that people with a reduced latent inhibition always treat the irrelevant as relevant; it's just that they consider everything as potentially relevant. In my own research, I found that; and latent inhibition seem to be independent abilities at least in people with a normally functioning working memory system.
