5 Important judgments on Intellectual Property Rights cases

A party may not be compelled to provide disclosure to its adversary unless ordered by court.

Trade Marks and Unfair Competition (LAWS70046) — The University of Melbourne Handbook

Should any party fail to answer the interrogation in whatever manner the court has directed, or fails to produce the required document, the court could, due to non-compliance of its orders and if the plaintiff is the defaulting party, dismiss the suit. The said order did not deal with any submissions of the Appellants, the case laws cited by the Appellants etc. The Trade Mark Act provides for a criminal liability in sect.
