Trouble mental et criminalité : revue critique des recherches épidémiologiques

In many communities of color, troubled relationships with law enforcement — linked to aggressive tactics and the disproportionate prosecution of drug crimes — hinder efforts to address violent crime. These may also be defined by age typically youth or peer group influences, and the permanence or consistency of their criminal activity. The former is mainly produced in Afghanistan and some south-west countries while the latter had a history of being produced in only south-east Asia, but has since moved to also being produced in Afghanistan.

Pauvreté et criminalité : un lien de cause à effet ?

One in 10 children 10. This rise in cooperation between criminal organizations has meant that law enforcement agencies are increasingly having to work together. There is a tendency away from centralization of power and reliance upon family ties towards a fragmentation of structures and informality of relationships in crime groups.
