The lords of the ruled over the northeastern Palatine Forest; the significant buildings there of this aristocratic family were the castles of and near Grünstadt and the castle of near Bad Dürkheim. The hard and resistant rocks of the Lower and Middle Bunter have produced a scarpland relief, whose characterize the landscape, especially in the north and east, whilst the southeastern part of the Palatinate Forest is dominated by rather isolated types of hill separated by erosion surfaces. Evidence of this changed attitude can be seen, for example, in the establishment in 1998 of the first cross-border biosphere reserve, the by.
