Medical Malpractice Claims Against Psychiatrists

For a psychiatrist to be liable for malpractice, he or she must have failed to take reasonable care, and the patient must have suffered injury as a result. I'm going through withdrawal and so far have had several anxiety attacks, a full blown panic attack, hostility, suicidal thoughts and A SEIZURE.

The Right Way to Avoid Malpractice Lawsuits

Finally she called me back the night before I was to get on a plane and was very rude.

He asked me why I was taking so many anti-depressants.

Jury Awards $1.5 Million in Suicide Malpractice Suit

In the vast majority of cases, expert testimony is required in order to establish the appropriate standard of care -- meaning the patient usually through an attorney consults a specialist usually another psychiatrist who offers an opinion as to what the proper course of conduct. The suit filed against the family doctor alleged that she had not adequately assessed the patient and inappropriately allowed his status to interfere with her pursuing necessary psychiatric referral. Currently, I am taking 100 mg X 2 of Zoloft, 0.
