Perspectives on Global Development 2021: From Protest to Progress?

Each study in this volume aims to answer a variety of development- and policy-related questions using the most appropriate of these three methodologies. It was especially evident in middle-income countries and was often most acute amongst the middle classes that have emerged in developing countries over recent decades. Immigrants have continued to come primarily from Mexico, and Central American and Asian countries, especially India and Vietnam.

International Migration Outlook 2020

By 2020, their share will have declined further to 47 percent, while that for Hispanics will have grown to 37 percent and that for Asians to 5 percent. Freeways, bridges, railroad tracks, and mass transit where available are all deteriorating. Current trends in fertility and immigration will produce that result shortly after 2050.
