The big problem with big words (hint: they make you look stupid)

I was actually thinking about writing an article that would have been very similar in tone, covering almost the exact same words, only less eloquently. Just what you want, I know. When it comes to online copywriting — writing in such a way to get people to buy or take some other specific action — you want to avoid using big words or trying to impress your audience with your big vocabulary.

Why Talking is Important

It's a powerful tool, and an especially powerful sales tool. Ronnie Somerville What a lot of bollocks.

Why Inspiration Matters

And God saw that the light was good. Princeton researchers ran three experiments: In the first experiment, they wrote admissions essays. Be beautiful with your words and one day, it could make someone somewhere realize what they've been missing their entire lives.

The only six words parents need to say to their kids about sports—or...

For we all stumble in many ways. I want to end with some encouragement.
