Historical and Traditional Sketches of Highland Families and of the Highlands : With an Addendum of Inverness in the Olden Time by John MacLean the Inverness Centarian (2018, Trade Paperback) for sale online

Most were made of animal skins such as otter, badger, goat and seal and by the late 1800s there appeared the sporan molach or hair sporran usually made from goat skins and so large that it almost covered the front of the kilt. The ribbons at the back were for adjusting the headband so that it fitted all head sizes. It's said that the few remaining Highland landlords had no option but to bend the knee to this legislation.

Of these statements there can be no doubt. We have a vast collection of cottages in Scotland, perfect for anyone hoping to get involved or see these fascinating traditions and customs in action in Scotland.

Ancient Highland Dress

The gift, they thought, was none the less real because there was no written proof of it.

The Highland Forts: Fort William, Fort George, Fort Augustus

On farms so let, the condition of the sub-tenants who were continued on the old footing, appears often to have been miserable in the extreme. Old Scotch plough, and Caschroim, or crooked spade, 75.

Inverness

Want to learn how to shot put? Well-found elements of that can be absorbed and passed on to the next generation so that it is once again a living heritage, although renewed for the present age. A fine horse, the property of his master, having been amissing, he was ordered to search for the animal, which he gladly consented to do, and on his finding the horse, rode at Gilpin speed to a remote part of the country with it and sold it. The most grievous perhaps of these was thirlage or multure, a due exacted from each tenant for the use of the mill of the district to convert their grain into meal.
