Knowledge and Salvation for a Troubled World: Sociology and the Conference on Science, Philosophy and Religion

This statement serves as eloquent testimony to the strength of his own convictions as a Bahá'í: Must we not as true Bahá'í believers in these times embrace our principles more positively, more realistically, and point everywhere possible our assertion of the teachings with a direct challenge? Marion Danielson Campbell C ; 5Jul77; R666167. And since our explorations provide scanty and scattered rather than systematic evidence bearing on such processes, this model must remain, for the time being, largely a matter of supposition. Thomas Reggie W ; 16Jul73; R555373.
