Background

Full records may also include the following information: name of ship served on, date of entry and discharge from each ship, date of death, date and place of birth and next of kin. The judges were able to divide themselves into several places for the carrying out of their duties, provided that there was always a quorum of five. The interesting thing was why William George Moulting appears to have been listed as a beneficiary.

Background

In going through the Act Books many unfinished entries relating to wills were noticed. In this particular case I would recommend going for the low hanging fruit first, so to speak.

How to find Prerogative Court of Canterbury wills

During the period 1796—1811, only personal estates valued at £20 or more were liable to death duty — leases, freeholds and real estate were not liable and do not appear in these records.

Prerogative Court of Canterbury and Court for Probate of Wills and Granting Administrations: Original Calendars and Indexes of Wills and Administration Grants

Our task is now completed, the whole of the work having been done after official hours. The death of Sir Nathaniel Brent, 6th November, 1652, reopened the entire question as regards the Prerogative Court of Canterbury. The Royal Naval Division, formed in September 1914, fought on land alongside the army in the First World War.

TNA includes inventories for some medieval Londoners.

Death/Estate Duty Records (Wills) Including Scotland & Ireland

This dataset forms a fragment of the complete list of wills proven at Canterbury available from The National Archives for the period from 1384 to 1858. The source included in this database is the index to these wills rather than the wills themselves. To say there are no records would not quite be true.

How to find Prerogative Court of Canterbury wills

It has a very, very small section on death duties. Until January 1858, all wills had to be proved by the church and other courts. So they are unfortunately disappointing.
