Forest Conservation

This report details the importance of conservation and equity as the basis of a strong outdoor economy and offers a menu of policy ideas that states can adopt to embrace the benefits of supporting a thriving outdoor recreation economy. In turn, this allows for a greater variety of businesses.

The Outdoor Recreation Economy by State

With increased financial resources due to transportation and healthcare savings, other purchases that fuel retail spending, home buying and associated economic development projects return to the private sector.

Western Maine Habitat Project

Managed by The Nature Conservancy.

Nature

It is currently made up of 10 states. Seven hundred sixty one 761 Iowa towns or 78% of all towns in Iowa, have enjoyed substantial economic impacts due to RAGBRAI since the first event in 1973.
