This was the decree of the state, and it had the effect of making him a martyr in the eyes of the populace and bringing about the first that year in London and the rest of the country, which included attacks on and other places of worship, with some being burned down. For Anglicans holding office it was a betrayal of their oaths; secondly, it was an example of hypocrisy and disregarding of principle for material gain. The sermon sold a hundred thousand copies, and 'the Doctor' was impeached and brought t trial in Westminster Hall before the House of Lords in March 1710.
