Religious Studies (RELS) < Virginia Commonwealth University

Every absence beyond your first four will result in a reduction of your final course grade by one half of a letter grade. Please be reminded that faculty and staff will continue to work from home and provide services remotely.

Syllabus for Introduction to Religious Studies

Intensive study of one or more selected topics concerning the philosophical aspects of basic religious beliefs and concepts.

Syllabus for World Religions

An overview of contemporary religious movements. Prerequisite: written permission of instructor. Students will develop core writing skills, as defined by the instructor, in the discipline of the course; complete multiple writing assignments of varying lengths, at least 2 of which must be revised; produce a minimum of 10-12 pages of writing, exclusive of the required drafts, over the course of the term; meet at least once in individual conference in person, by phone, or electronically with the instructor or TA to discuss writing in progress; and receive detailed feedback on their drafts and revisions, on both content and expression.

Syllabus for Introduction to Religious Studies

The systems of thought are examined in the light of their social, political and religious impact on China, Korea and Japan. Part III How does the religious outlook and style of devotion contained in this text compare to your own? Writers who reflect religious traditions, as well as those who are informed by humanism or atheism, are read and interpreted.
