Distribution of Income

The sharp rise in income concentration at the top since the late 1970s was interrupted briefly by the dot-com collapse in the early 2000s and again in 2008 with the onset of the financial crisis and Great Recession, but top incomes generally have been on the rise since 2009. A quarter of household heads have a postgraduate or professional qualification, a third have a four-year degree, and most of the rest have at least some college education: In recent decades, the labor market returns to education have risen. In contrast, the net worth of families in lower tiers of wealth decreased by at least 20% from 2007 to 2016.
