Arrangement in Grey and Black No.1 by James McNeill Whistler

A Portrait of Whistler's Mother: Arrangement in Grey and Black No. Although our reproductions come in standard sizes, they can be enlarged as per your requirement. The painting has been featured or mentioned in numerous works of fiction and within pop culture.

Arrangement in Grey and Black No.1 (Portrait of the Art... (#126903)

The portrait was painted in around 1872, and was quickly acquired by a long-term friend and patron of Whistler, Alexander Ionides. He places his mother in a room that reflects her son's refined tastes, from the dripping, dancing curtain like one of his nocturnes to the Japanese footstool, the elegant chair legs and fine pictures. Another is that Whistler originally envisioned painting the model standing up, but that his mother was too uncomfortable to pose standing for an extended period.

Whistler Paintings, Bio, Ideas

The painter is seated side on to the mirror that he can be assumed to have been using, turning his head to examine his own form: the quizzical penetrating gaze beneath the boyish tumble of curls, the firm mouth and chin over the rather bulky body — revealing something of a paunch that is also seen in a number of other self-renderings.

A Portrait of Whistler's Mother: Arrangement in Grey and Black No.1 Painting by James Abbott McNeill Whistler Reproduction

This particular image has been the source inspiration for many other paintings, including Albert Herter's Portrait of Bessie 1892 and Henry Ossawa Tanner's portrait of his own mother.

Whistler's Mother (Arrangement in Grey and Black No.1) by James Abbott McNeill Whistler

Whistler was also a showman and a provocateur.
