

Politicaleconomy of Kenya

Praeger - Republic of Kenya

How we used Knowledge of Political Economy

- Decision to re-engage with Government with new CAS aligned to support the Government's program
- Links with ESSC—capacity building support for meeting prior actions and subsequent benchmarks (Capacity Building Fund)
- RCSS design—focus on delivering results—supportive for transformative leadership, change management and public sector values and ethics as critical elements to be addressed as part of capacity building for public sector reforms to succeed
- No support to Civil Service Reform due to unwillingness of new government to take tough action
- Push for greater harmonization and alignment of operational policies, procedures, and practices between development agencies with the Government's medium-term planning, budgeting, and disbursement procedures can help enhance the effectiveness of support to the Government
- Strong leadership is required from the Cabinet which demonstrates political will, as well as Permanent Secretaries and Accounting officers, who have the primary responsibility of spearheading public Sector Reforms (no more Dream Team)
- A long-term strategic approach to technical assistance, which is not donor driven, is needed to achieve results. No quick fix approach to reform
