They also had British passports, issued in 1946 by the Foreign Office showing that Broderick-Hartley had been making trips to South Africa and South America while living in England. We managed to get hold of Susan Kemp who denied any knowledge of Creighton's whereabouts, although we never believed her professed ignorance. Is it this last unhappy fact that makes them stand out from all the rest and will make them unforgettable? The villagers were easily taken in by Bormann's cover story and he integrated himself into the life of the community for ten years.

Would he demonstrate the means by which messages were sent to Bletchley through a piano? In my view, making a little Gentile boy take on the sin because Jews want to watch television is about as hypocritical as you can get. The publishers seemed duly impressed with Creighton's casual and disarming manner which never seemed remotely thrown by any question and the way he offered a plausible explanation for anything that appeared counter to logic or common sense. She Immediately, volunteered to take part and, at a meeting between Donovan and Morton on 9 April at Birdham, permission for her involvement was granted and she was given the pseudonym of Alice, another name borrowed from A.
