Crucial Factors and Interests Influencing Foreign Policy of Pakistan

It is time to do things differently.

Pakistan wishes to peacefully resolve Kashmir issue: Qureshi

It was not a policy of equidistance from these states but emphasised mutuality of interests at the bilateral level without alienating one for the sake of the other. State needs foreign policy because as Aristotle said that man is a social animal cannot live without society like that state also cannot live alone without its society i. The shift in the United States policy obliged Islamabad to revisit its foreign and strategic policy.

CPEC's Threat Matrix

Almost all units of the armed forces were regrouped and a new organizational and administrative network had to be created for them. The transformation in the global politics and change of government in the country are necessitating a serious and constructive approach towards domestic and external challenges.

Afghanistan, Pakistan and Kashmir: A grand bargain?

Therefore, they are putting efforts to malign CPEC and BRI. This enhanced Pakistan's strategic relevance for the major powers, especially the United States, which cultivated Pakistan for combating terrorism and ensuring peace and stability in the post-Taliban Afghanistan. Rather, at the center of the peace process were bilateral talks between Afghanistan and Pakistan, which had been backing the insurgent mujahideen against the Afghan government.

Economic Relations Take Centre Stage Economic ties should be the premier focus for both countries in the first 5 years of the decade long roadmap. Its activism reflects a realization that such a policy facilitates the mobilization of International support and resources for its domestic socio-economic development, helps to regulate the inputs from the external environment into the internal context, and contributes to strengthening security and territorial integrity which are the principal concerns of Pakistan's foreign policy.
