They strolled around Moscow Zoo, inspected two pandas lent by China as a sign of great trust and were greeted in Mandarin by Russian children.

Customs and Excise Act [Chapter 23:02]

Is it impossible to give each area served by British Railways a fares structure related to its special circumstances, designed to get back the traffic that it has lost to the roads, and to attract new traffic? Some of this is natural; many northern land masses, long pressed down by the mass of ice-age ice sheets, have been rising up since their unburdening some 15,000 years ago.

Back to the Future? Lessons on the Pro

From the national point of view, my major fear is that we might be left in the 1980s with a derelict system which is still labour-intensive, with the overwhelming and depressing feature of constant, recurring and increasing operating deficits. One, although little more than a minor inconvenience, was occasionally embarrassing: the problem of protesters rooting up legislation from the Victorian era when, for one reason or another, the railway company of the day had been obliged to provide a railway service in perpetuity. The line was to be built from Vancouver, 460 miles northeast to Prince George, passing through Squamish, Lillooet, Williams Lake, and Quesnel.

Briefing

However, normally I should expect an increase in the borrowing powers to the extent contained in this Bill, up to £900 million, to be worthy of mention in the Long Title. Section 53 5 above quoted says that the Court may draw all such inferences as are not inconsistent with the facts expressly found by the Commission and are necessary for determining the question of jurisdiction or law or as the case may be. The location of all authorised crossing points should be suitably identified.
