Cuthbert's was a policy of beautification, which proceeded without a pause from 1887 until 1914 and turned an impressive but unoriginal building into a monument to turn-of-the-century AngloCatholic taste rivalled in London only by Holy Trinity, Sloane Street.

St Cuthbert's Church Earl's Court

At the same time a small school for boys and girls was built by Conybeare and Wignmore to the south of the church in Warwick Road; this cost nearly £1,100.

A Case Without Parallel: The Bishops of London and the Anglican Church 33 is a list of East India licences issued by Gibson between 1725 and 1742. A guild of gentlemen practise the arts of carving in stone and in wood... The ladies are occupied in painting on glass or on panels, they embroider the vestments, the banners, and the hangings; others are excellent workers in metal; others have charge of the flowers in the church.

London's Victorian churches deserve a second gothic revival

A real eye opener for someone from a small town the other side of the world. Nor was there any pictorial stained glass at the time of consecration. Situated on Philbeach Gardens, SW5.

St Cuthbert's Drop

For example, the carved stone diapering of varying pattern gradually extended round the walls between 1890 and 1909 fig.
