Edward Hazel could neither read nor write but his story has been told through the correspondence that he carried for Gov.

THE BRITISH INVASION FROM THE NORTH by J.P. BAXTER

He had at his disposal 125 regular infantry, 14 regular artillerymen, and 296 militiamen who faced the situation with fortitude and the hope that their comrades at Lewiston would soon come to their aid.

Manuscript Report Series / Travail inédit

Tradition whispers that these long years of single life were the result of a disappointing love affair with Jane Carleton, a pretty cousin, when both he and she were young.
