

Survey to evaluate general practitioners perceptions of the role of the chiroprapist within a primary healthcare team.

University of Central England in Birmingham - General practice (GP) level analysis shows that patients' own perceptions of support within primary care as reported in the GP patient survey (GPPS) are as important as medication and services in improving glycaemic control

Description: -

-survey to evaluate general practitioners perceptions of the role of the chiroprapist within a primary healthcare team

-survey to evaluate general practitioners perceptions of the role of the chiroprapist within a primary healthcare team

Notes: Thesis (M.A.)-University of Central England in Birmingham, 1999.

This edition was published in 1999

Filesize: 19.87 MB

Tags: #Perceptions, #attitudes #and #training #needs #of #primary #healthcare #professionals #in #identifying #and #managing #frailty: #a #qualitative #study

A qualitative evaluation of general practitioners' perceptions regarding access to medicines in New Zealand

Some occupational therapists expressed a desire for professionals to focus on multidisciplinary patient goals and not solely focusing on patient goals within their own field of expertise. Ramseier C, Warnakulasuriya S, Needleman I, Gallagher J, Lahtinen A, et al. Some professionals cite a lack of time or lack of training in smoking cessation counselling.

Examining the practice of generalist expertise: a qualitative study identifying constraints and solutions

However, our decision to limit study participants to GPs and CNs was made by drawing on formal descriptions of professionals constituting PHC team in Lithuania. Our data are derived from convenience samples, predominantly from the UK.

Teamwork in primary care: perspectives of general practitioners and community nurses in Lithuania

A: I think that the only way to learn this to be an expert in generalisation is to meet every day, many, many patients and to learn from them, I think that they are the best teacher to us. Adoption of the concept of the development of primary health care, No V-717.

Examining the practice of generalist expertise: a qualitative study identifying constraints and solutions

However, they often feel overwhelmed by the workload, not confident in dealing with frailty and limited by systemic deficits. A systematic review and meta-analysis.

Perceptions of pharmacists' roles in the era of expanding scopes of practice

Hum A, Robinson L, Jackson A, and Ali K. Carlebach S and Hamilton S.

Perceptions of pharmacists' roles in the era of expanding scopes of practice

JAMA Internal Medicine, 2014; 174 8 :1291—8.

Related Books

- Evesham and the neighbourhood.
- Book of ones own - developing literacy through making books
- Mots chiliens.
- Relaxation for concentration, stress management, and pain control using the Fleming method
- Processing mortgage-backed securities