Dominicans in Worcester and Robert Holcot, O.P. (d. 1349)

The legislation was abandoned despite strong cross-party support, to make room in the parliamentary legislative programme for measures to deal with the credit crunch, though it may be revived in future. Designed in part by Bullock and Vixseboxe, the well known architects, it reflects the former's copiousness and the latter's Transvaal Republic influence. The decagonal Chapter House with its huge flying buttresses is the first polygonal chapter house in England.

Listed building

Every element and feature of the building must be photographed and documented in writing such as their location and function. He then sent the western imperial regalia to Constantinople.
