10 of the Best Poems about Time

It's all happening in our time. First Time Came Ah well! I recall a moving essay you wrote where you talk about your mom giving you a suitcase and a typewriter, which gave you permission to do those things: to travel and to write. This collection celebrates both and inspires creative wordplay.

Time for Poetry: Found Poems

For ever warm and still to be enjoy'd, For ever panting, and for ever young; All breathing human passion far above, That leaves a heart high-sorrowful and cloy'd, A burning forehead, and a parching tongue. Days, three hundred sixty-five Make a year for me to strive Eight good things for me to do, That I wise may grow and true.

Time for poetry

So swift I scarce have had time to look on, And the incidents note of each passing day. Oh, leave me, still, the rapid flight That makes the changing seasons gay, The grateful speed that brings the night, The swift and glad return of day; The months that touch, with added grace, This little prattler at my knee, In whose arch eye and speaking face New meaning every hour I see; The years, that o'er each sister land Shall lift the country of my birth And nurse her strength, till she shall stand The pride and pattern of the earth; Till younger commonwealths, for aid, Shall cling about her ample robe, And from her frown shall shrink afraid The crowned oppressors of the globe.

'This Is the Time for Poetry': A Conversation With Alice Walker

The seventeenth century was the age of the carpe diem poem, where poets implored young people to make the most of time, before time made dead bodies of them. As soon to say no time to eat, sleep, love or die. Each one furnished with sixty wings, With which we fly on our unseen track, And not a minute ever comes back.

Time for Poetry: Found Poems

Over the course of numerous emails and a telephone conversation, a pensive yet jovial Alice Walker shared with me her thoughts on the enduring relevance of poetry to societies in upheaval, becoming an elder, and why Rilke's Letters to a Young Poet remains at the top of her list of all-time favorite books. Thou mayest denude mine arm of strength, And leave my temples seamed and bare; Deprive mine eyes of passion's light, And scatter silver o'er my hair. There is a time to help men seek Our God who saves the soul; A time to show them that the meek Shall reach life's highest goal; A time to help them turn aside And leave the wicked throng; But never did our God provide A time to treat men wrong.
