H.M.S. Hood Association

When read in conjunction with the 1939 Fighting Instructions, a fascinating picture of an institution adapting to change and preparing itself for the onslaught of a dangerous future unfolds. During the War of 1812 the Royal Navy's blockade of the US Atlantic ports was coordinated from Bermuda and Halifax, Nova Scotia.

Dust jacket shows some rubbing. After this experience, President Franklin D. In the latter operation ran great risks to extract the Army, and saved many men to fight another day.

BEFORE THE IRONCLAD Warship Design and Development 1815

This unsuccessful ship was in commission just five years before being laid up for a decade and eventually re-engined. In the first nine months of the war, German U-boats sank a little more than 1 million tons of shipping, whereas they and the Italians together destroyed more than 2. Narrative overview, especially good on the activity of smaller navies; the many wars; and civil wars of Latin America, the Crimean, and the American Civil and Italo-Austrian Wars.

HMS Vanguard (1835)

Gunboats were traditionally shallow draft sailing vessels armed with a couple of long guns mounted and firing forward, supplemented by a broadside armament of carronades. This work is the seminal piece on the technological development of the Royal Navy in the years between the end of the Napoleonic Wars and the arrival of armored hulls. Many of these long-delayed ships were completed in the second half of the 1880s, and this was misrepresented as the French having more new battleships than the Royal Navy in various publications including the famous 1884 articles in the Liberal magazine, which alarmed the public just before the General Election, and helped create an increased market for books on naval matters such as the Naval Annual, which was first published in 1887.
