32 London Boroughs and the City of London

The number of births in London has fallen slightly from 134,000 following a mini baby boom in years running up to 2012. These share characteristics such as a very large catchment, highly productive centres, and retail offers that are well aligned to their catchments and elevated purchasing power. Lewisham Formed in 1965 by combining the former metropolitan boroughs of Lewisham and Deptford, the London Borough of Lewisham is actually led by a directly elected mayor, unlike other English councils.

Demography of London

Former office buildings on Lyon Road including Coal House, once belonging to the have been regenerated into new mixed use buildings in the 2010s, whereas on Pinner Road behind St George's centre a new eight storey development called Trident Point was built which includes a large supermarket opened in 2013. Effectively what would today be regarded as a cable company, the Company folded after the closure of the Electrophone Exchange, which followed the decline of the service in the face of competition from the increasingly accessible and varied programmes of the BBC radio service.

Greater London

Some continental telephone and telegraph and transatlantic telephone services were reopened. Almost two-thirds of housing stock in the present day Borough of Harrow dates back to the interwar period. Minicabs can be significantly cheaper for airport journeys - for example, a minicab from Heathrow to South-West London will cost around £36, whereas a black cab will cost over £100.

Tower of London

Districts in the London Borough of Croydon include , a village to the east of Croydon which until 2000 was poorly linked to the rest of the borough as it was without any railway or light rail stations, with only a few patchy bus services. Quantitative analysis can be used as a screen to eliminate centres that do not offer these advantages. Harrow is classified as one of 13 metropolitan centres in the.
