Mircea Eliade's vision for a new humanism

Eliade then goes on to claim that the images of Christ in the Gospels stand in no contradiction to images of Christ in religious folklore.

This new state of affairs Eliade calls as New Humanism. He argues that 'theology is fully entitled to formulate the case and to say its personal word on the problem of religion and religions, on the basis of its peculiar presuppositions' Kraemer considers Hindu spirituality is antagonistic to Biblical revelation.
