And of course, the Project Network program ends with a grand exhibition. Jens Quistgaard did this as well, and he also often referred to his muses, Romanesque forms and Norse revivalism.

500+ Danish potters ideas

Beginning her work in the late 1940s, Ditzel worked through the 1990s, continuing to exhibit and win awards until her death in 2005. Used intelligently, it makes something as simple as boiling an egg cost half as much as it would in a thin, badly designed utensil, even though a three-minute egg still takes about as long today as it did in 1722. Even the most utilitarian of their products tend to come in a range of bright, playful shades, making them ideal for adding some well-placed pops of color to your kitchen.
