Reproductive Health in Refugee Situations: An Inter

This Field Manual does not address a number of other issues related to reproductive health, either because they are relatively less significant in terms of public health, or because they may be approached as in normal situations and information on the issue is abundant elsewhere.

Needs are best met through involving affected communities in every phase of action: from assessing needs to designing programmes, to launching and maintaining programmes and evaluating their impact. The global political community has also made progress, especially in addressing the gravity of sexual violence in armed conflict. Foreword

In 2018, the Inter-Agency Working Group on Reproductive Health in Crises will release a new edition of this global resource. This list can also be used for supervising and monitoring. New tools and guidelines developed through the humanitarian reform process and the cluster system continue to recognize the authoritative guidance of the Field Manual for reproductive health interventions in humanitarian settings.

This Field Manual is intended to assist field staff in implementing such services in phases, moving from minimal to comprehensive services as the situation gradually stabilises. A more comprehensive package of RH interventions must then be provided as the situation stabilises. Not all components of RH service provision are appropriate within the initial phases of a refugee situation.
