The Imperial Harem of Topkapı Palace

Samarra was built as the new capital of the Islamic Empire in AD 836 and, at the time, was one of the largest cities in the world.

A Look Inside the Exotic World of Pleasure of a Sultan's Harem

A two-room apartment leading off the opposite end of the Chamber of Murat III was allocated to the crown prince.

In Islam you are not technically allowed to enslave Muslims, so most of these girls come from border territories — from central Asia, from Ethiopia, from the Basque Country in Northern Spain. Each of these women had quarters of their own, where they lived with their children and their own servants. SPOILERS: I was not helped in reading this by the fact that I despised Hürrem.

The Sultan's Harem

Their education would begin as soon as they set foot in the Harem. It may simply have been the natural result of an excess of power, riches, and ease.
