In 1953, Melvin Tunin 1919-1994 countered the Davis-Moore thesis in Some Principles of Stratification: A Critical Analysis. A special staff, varying from 120 to 350 at peak times, compiled the census results using mechanical tabulation methods.

Population of Canada

A new tradition The 1871 Census began a tradition that is still operative in census-taking today: information on the ancestral origins of all Canadians, including Aboriginal persons, was recorded. As described in the section on Urban and Urban Place, the compilation in the 1930s of an historical series of population totals for all urban places places of 2,500 or more population since 1790 identified some corrections to urban places and their populations at earlier censuses.

However, when a social category like class, occupation, gender, or race puts people in a position in which they can claim a greater share of resources or services, then social differentiation becomes the basis of social inequality. In addition to annexations, there may be detachments of territory, boundary adjustments, reclamation projects that create new land area, changes in how swampy areas are classified, and changes in measurement techniques.
