Brontë, Patrick Branwell 1817

Charlotte and Branwell made copies of the prints , Déluge, and Joshua Commanding the Sun to Stand Still upon Gibeon 1816 , which hung on the walls of the parsonage. In 1812, he met and married 29-year-old Maria Branwell and by 1820 they had moved into the parsonage at Haworth where he took up the post of Haworth was an ancient chapelry in the large parish of , so he could not be rector or vicar. Tuberculosis, which afflicted Maria and Elizabeth in 1825, was the eventual cause of death of three of the surviving Brontës: Branwell in September 1848, Emily in December 1848, and finally, Anne five months later in May 1849.

Charlotte especially admired , whose portrait, given to her by Smith, still hangs in the dining room at Haworth parsonage. Charlotte described her as very lively, very sensitive, and particularly advanced in her reading. But, believe me, lovely, delicate and sprightly woman, is not formed by nature, to pore over the musty pages of Grecian and Roman literature, or to plod through the windings of Mathematical Problems, nor has Providence assigned for her sphere of action, either the cabinet or the field.

Anne Brontë (Brontë, Anne, 1820

In Jane Eyre, Cowan Bridge becomes Lowood, Maria is represented by the character of the young Helen Burns, the cruelty of the mistress Miss Andrews by that of Miss Scatcherd, and the tyranny of the headmaster, the , by that of Mr Brocklehurst.

The three sisters and their brother, 1817—1848 , were very close and during childhood developed their imaginations first through oral storytelling and play set in an intricate imaginary world, and then through the collaborative writing of increasingly complex stories set therein. The first one covers the wild countryside of the , the little village of Haworth, the parsonage and the church surrounded by its vast cemetery perched on the top of a hill.
