Transition to Practice

As patients, employers, insurers, and governments become more aware of the benefits offered by nurses, they may also begin demanding that health care providers restructure their services around the contributions that a transformed nursing workforce can make.

Exploring conceptual and theoretical frameworks for nurse practitioner education: a scoping review protocol

No one calls the initial primary care physician to share discharge planning or information, and no one gives the patient a summary of the visit to take to that physician.

EBP is often described as a process consisting of distinct activities including, formulating questions, searching for information, compiling the appraised information, implementing evidence, and evaluating the resulting practice. Elle a pour principale fonction de te répondre, car veiller et vou- loir sont une seule et même chose. Il y a presque toujours une part de rappel mécanique et une part de reconstitution intelligente, si bien mêlées ensemble que nous ne saurions dire où commence l'une et oii finit l'autre.
