The white customers' patronization of Chinatown prostitutes was more extensive than gambling. But if we try our best to fight to stay, who knows who will win in the end? A of the used in the was built in 1999 by Thomas Marsh and stands in the square.

The Impact of the 1906 Earthquake on San Francisco's Chinatown

Phelan nurtured his reputation as the Progressive crusader who rebuilt San Francisco, riding it to a future Senate seat. But this small, highly-stylised slice of the Orient could be located in almost any Western city in the world — and perhaps surprisingly, almost nowhere in China. Between 1908 and 1913, Congress debated whether to make a water resource available or preserve a wilderness when the growing city of San Francisco, California proposed building a dam in the Hetch Hetchy Valley to provide a steady water supply.
