The shops were built in streets or rows, some named after the nations that gathered there, others after the goods offered for sale.

Medieval Parks of Hertfordshire by Anne Rowe, Paperback

The villa was found to have grown out of a settlement belonging to the late Iron Age. All the data for each park is presented in a valuable gazetteer with the cartographic and field evidence that has been used to locate the parks in today's landscape. Figures for Cumberland, Northumberland and Westmorland are provided from the 1336 taxation.

Medieval Parks of Hertfordshire by Anne Rowe

Based on an enormous amount of original research, this in-depth study of parks created in Hertfordshire between the 11th and the 15th centuries paints a vivid picture of this medieval county and illuminates a significant aspect of its landscape history. In what ways is the Welsh section different from the English section? The attached DVD contains over a dozen maps which have been derived from the digital version, and which illustrate many of the issues discussed in the text, as well as related material which should likewise be useful to students of landscape history, historical geography and local history. However, when the claim was accepted by contemporary officials, the markets or fair concerned has been entered in the Gazetteer as Grant Other; see for example , Essex.

During the Easter and Summer university vacations, then armed with fat folders of half-foolscap sheets, Pevsner set off to visit two counties, driven by his wife and, after her death in 1963, by others, usually students at London University or the Courtauld Institute of Art. Every year the GA runs an extensive programme of CPD events across the country.

Parks in Medieval England (Medieval History and Archaeology)

The fact that these new parks followed the templates which had been established and passed down the generations of the greater noble families emphasises their importance as status symbols, ultimately linked to aristocratic hunting culture. Those leading the charge in this area seemingly believed the only way to teach people how to behave was to put strong punishments in place, even in the case of small offences.
