Hull and East Riding c.1955

In 1948, Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir Stafford Cripps made a radio broadcast to empathise with the British people on their anxieties over the tough austerity measures that carried on until 1950. Perhaps the post-war mass consumer society was ultimately to blame. The stern trawler could also spend more time at sea, but more importantly the workload was less demanding on the crew as opposed to the smaller side-winding fleet.

Age Affluence by Bogdanor

Since then it has led to a huge gap between the rich and the poor. Designed for A Level AQA specification Making of Modern Britain.

Tony Blair and The Constitution

Siedentop wrote an essay on Harold Macmillan. This optimism was evident as the country went to the polls on 5 July.

Affluent society 1951

However some felt that the year 1951 was a year of change, they felt as if they were on the way to a new modern.

Post War Consensus 1951

Additionally, Wilson ending this period of dominance in the October 1964 general election after bringing both factions of his party together suggests that the infighting was a major factor behind allowing the Conservatives to dominate. Between the years 1945-51 the Labour party developed the atomic bomb. Some moderate creases and wear.

Affluent society 1951

National newspapers had large circulations of millions since the Internet had not been invented.

'Affluence' and the Left in Britain, c.1958

Ransome argues that the working classes co-exist with the current middle-classes. Marking the rise of affluence for some lucky people in modern Britain.
