Urbanization in Africa: challenges and opportunities for conservation

It also highlights the key factors of conveniences for TOD.

Urban agriculture : findings from four city case studies

Most cities have mechanisms for acquiring land either at market rates which means that schemes are never implemented , or at arbitrarily low confiscatory rates where the alliance of political forces and landlords blocks the acquisition anyway. This open access book revisits the theoretical foundations of urban planning and the application of these concepts and methods in the context of Southern countries by examining several case studies from different regions of the world. The poor are particularly vulnerable to the impact of financial and economic crisis under globalisation.

Urban planning and design in unauthorized neighborhoods using case studies

Nor is the emphasis on Third World cities meant to imply that problems within the cities of industrialized countries are not serious. To become key agents of development, city governments need enhanced political, institutional, and financial capacity, notably access to more of the wealth generated in the city.

Urbanization in Sub

This is the century of the 'urban revolution'.
