Reminiscences of a Stock Operator: 31: LefÃ“vre, Edwin, Lowenstein, Roger: spaceneb.us.to.au: Books

Much of what we enjoy most in Scottish stories is not on account of wit properly so called, in the speaker, but I should say rather from the odd and unexpected view which is taken of some matter, or from the quaint and original turn of the expression made use of, or from the simple and matter-of-fact reference made to circumstances which are unusual. On riding, home one evening, he passed a cottage or small farmhouse, where there was a considerable assemblage of people, and an evident incipient merry-making for some festive occasion. Paradoxical as it may seem, Professor Thome, while, in stature, he was a small man, was, yet, a very large man; it is difficult to express an opinion as to, whether his brain or his heart were the larger; of one fact I am certain, however --he was the friend of the poor and needy of every race, for, he was truly cosmopolitan in his thought and action.

Grayson County Reminiscences: The First 150 Years, 1846

I had a potage, fish—anything but fresh, and, according to English predilections and taste, of course I ordered a beef-steak and pommes de terre. My pockets were searched, and all the earnings which I had received from my dear cousin Celia, for scrubbing the kitchen, taken from me; so, that, as Mr. About twenty years ago, under the apprehension of cholera, committees of the most influential inhabitants of the county of Moray were formed to enforce a more complete cleansing of its towns and villages, and to induce the cottagers to remove their dunghills or dung-pits from too close a proximity to their doors or windows.

70th Birthday Poems

King refused to return it, saying that he had never engaged to return the principal; and dared her to take any proceedings against him, as, being a married woman, she had no power over the money.
