The Charles H. Wright Museum of African American History

The design for the new encasements will allow conservators to open and reseal the cases-- if it's ever necessary-- to examine the documents or modify the interior components. The transmittal page was the first parchment page to be removed from its old encasement and placed in the prototype encasement. A 24-hour guard would provide protection.

DETROIT BLACK FILM FESTIVAL

Campers explore and celebrate the accomplishments of individuals in a variety of fields and careers across the African Diaspora. Please review the updated and accept changes. In 1992, Detroit voters authorized the City of Detroit to sell construction bonds to finance a larger building, and ground was broken for the third generation of the Museum in August 1993.
