What matters in Indigenous education: Implementing a Vision Committed to Holism, Diversity and Engagement

Indigenous and Northern Affairs Canada.

Education of Indigenous Peoples in Canada

The Canadian residential school system is now widely understood to be a component of the long, tragic genocide wrought upon indigenous peoples everywhere in North America, targeting their language, culture, religion and kinship structures in a deliberate attempt to erase those unique communal bonds. As a result, the debate about whether the Canadian government also committed physical and biological genocide against Indigenous populations remains open.

Contexts of Adult Education: Canadian Perspectives

The network was funded by the 's and administered by. Federal policies that tied funding to enrollment numbers led to sick children being enrolled to boost numbers, thus introducing and spreading disease.
