Introduction: Can Schools Save Indigenous Languages? Policy and Practice on Four Continents

Starting from the premise that indigenous language revitalization is worth doing, the focus here is on HOW to do it, and in particular, the role of schools in that endeavour. Large amounts of local knowledge about fauna and flora, ecosystem management, local place names, spiritual values, and so on are all submerged, altered or gone because the original languages that expressed these concepts are gone or no longer well understood. Heritage language teaching in Canadian schools.
