Serrano v. Priest

Although the following text confines itself to a description of the basic operational features of the new law from the standpoint of the ongoing foundational approach on which it is based, it is appropriate to note at this point that S. Local financing systems three and four, as we have seen, necessarily involve wealth relationships -- direct or inverse -- and to any extent that they are used, school funding will be based on wealth relationships. Opportunity ought to be settled, either by disproof or by developing new models of schooling that are effective.

Now that they have been incorporated into the state supreme court's order, they take on the force of law and will bind the state government. Recognize that other reform efforts, such as more professional development and teacher innovation, raise achievement levels but not graduation rates. And finally, voter preference for educational expenditures varies directly with personal income.
