Performance Studies

Course Description This course introduces the anthropology of performance. . Daniel Siekhaus is a final-year PhD candidate in Management Studies at Judge Business School, Cambridge, and an Associate Researcher of the Institute for Capitalizing on Creativity at St Andrews, Scotland.

Anthropology of Performance

Three key issues in the study of performance that run through the course concern the role of aesthetics, belief, and audience.

Anthropology of Performance

When one understands performance beyond theatricality and recognizes it as fundamental and inherent to life and culture, one enters the ambiguities of everyday, empirical spaces and places that are foreign, contentious, and often under siege. One enters the ordinary and discreet and interprets both poetics and politics to discover extraordinary and embodied meanings and practices.
