Foveal acuity, peripheral acuity and search performance: A review

Movement speed, task time, distance walked and collisions with the environment were analysed as performance measures.

The screens were divided into five areas to topographically match with five VF sectors. Any potential participants with more than 0. The aim of this experiment was to test the hypothesis that myopes have reduced resolution acuity compared to emmetropes.

Towards an assistive peripheral visual prosthesis for long

In addition, analysis of the slope in functional decline with eccentricity revealed asymmetry between hemifields along both the horizontal and vertical meridians for emmetropes and myopes. Three layouts of assistive vision corresponding to hypothetical electrode array layouts were compared, emphasizing higher visual acuity, a wider visual angle, or eccentricity-dependent acuity across an intermediate angle.
