The Pentrich rebellion: in 1817, during a period of economic hardship following the war with France, a motley crew of stocking

The IRA returned fire and engaged the UVF in the Diamond. Clifton at Lytham Hall, his men being quartered round Kirkham. At Standish they deprived the Constable of his warrant, which had that day been published by the Vicar in church.

Giessen POW Camp in the Great War

The most common grades were the cottons which included Middling Orleans; it was these grades that were used by the majority of Lancashire's producers. From his bed he would have heard that the Australian Division was to disembark at Alexandria and proceed to Cairo for training.

Alexander Rigby of Middleton near Preston, was certainly the most active of the Lancashire Parliamentarians.

The Great Hunger

An unlikely hotbed Today Pentrich in Derbyshire is a quiet village 14 miles from Nottingham, hardly the place, you would think, which would spawn an insurrection. She was fiercely proud of her husband being among the first to enlist, but that would not have made it any easier to watch him go. The mills used 300,000 hp 220,000 kW of which 18,500 was generated by water power.

Prior to this the barracks in had been burnt out and the troops decided to execute the young men in revenge. In the months of June and July 1642, the two factions in arms were facing each other all over England and it was really an accident rather than otherwise in which county the first blow was struck. No Parliamentarian troops were ever marched out of the county until the issue at home was decided.
